A group of about 20 protestors, including family members of an emotionally disturbed man who was shot by police in Kingsbridge Heights last month, held a rally outside the 52nd Precinct in Norwood on Friday, April 7, calling for “Justice for Raul” and the release of the names of the two officers involved in the shooting.

As reported, Raul de la Cruz, 43, was shot by police when officers from the 52nd Precinct responded to a call regarding an emotionally disturbed person armed with a knife at 2685 Grand Concourse on Sunday, March 26, at around 10:04 a.m. Outside the precinct on April 7, holding a bullhorn, the leader of the group, Adrian, addressed

Rally Held Opposing New Kingsbridge Charter School

By SÍLE MOLONEY
Following concerns over plans by the International Leadership Charter High School (ILCHS) to open a new, 7-story middle school at 306 West 232nd Street in Kingsbridge, one block away from its existing school site at 3060 Riverdale Avenue, Assemblyman Jeffrey Dinowitz (A.D. 81), District 11 City Councilman Eric Dinowitz, and State Sen. Robert Jackson (S.D. 31) joined a group of local residents and members of the Construction and General Building Laborers union on Saturday, April 15, for a rally to oppose the opening on the grounds the area was ill-equipped to handle the new school.

The assemblyman had previously sent a letter to the SUNY Charter School Institute, which oversees ILCHS as the trustee, asking how the school would safely operate and provide required amenities and programs to future students given what he said were the geographic constraints of the proposed school site.

The assemblyman added that he, Jackson, and the councilman had also written to the NYC Department of Education (DOE) to ensure public monies linked to the 3030 Riverdale Avenue charter school campus being used appropriately and responsibly, adding that the campus was financed through the Build NYC Resource Corporation for a total of $20,655,000.

He said he understood ILCHS already owned the Riverdale Avenue school campus, which serves grades 9-12 and has a maximum occupancy capacity, per NYC Department of Buildings (DOB), of 758 people. Dinowitz said ILCHS was, however, planning to rent the site for the new middle school at 306 West 232nd Street from the developer. He said ILCHS also reportedly requested a reduction in student population at its existing school site to 430 students for grades 8 & 9-12 in the 2024-2025 school year.

The assemblyman said ILCHS had said it had expected 250-300 middle school students to attend the new campus, and that he and his colleagues had therefore asked what were the parameters of the Build NYC Resource Corporation bonds, what would be the fiscal impact to DOE to rent additional space at the proposed new middle school site at 306 West 232nd Street, and were there any other examples of charter schools in New York City where a school both owned and rented property.

Speaking at the event, the councilman asked how the school was going to manage the project, adding that as of the date of the rally the school had refused to meet with the community to discuss how it would actually be run. “How are they going to keep our students safe? How are they going to be good neighbors to us, communicate and be part of the neighborhood?” he asked.

The councilman added that the school was apparently “not above reaching out to the community when it came to advertising the facility, but couldn’t spend a “few bucks on a phone call, zero dollars on an email or a couple of cents on a stamp” to discuss the community’s concerns at a meeting. “We’ve asked, you’ve asked, and they’ve said, ‘no’,” he said.

The council continued, “That is not what makes good neighbors.” He said with all the concerns around the construction, the impact of traffic, the number of people in the neighborhood, the school had a responsibility to talk with the community. “If this is any indication of what they are going to do in the years going forward...” the councilman said. Jackson then added, “We don’t want ‘em! We don’t want neighbors that are not going to be neighbors.” The assemblyman, meanwhile, was then seen giving a thumbs down amid applause.

Norwood News reached out by phone for comment to the International Leadership Charter High School for comment. A person initially replied by phone, saying, “No comment.” Later, a lengthy written statement from Dr. Elaine Ruiz Lopez, CEO of the school, was provided, touting the school’s various successes and in which she said it was unfortunate that the expansion of the middle school, “though fully supported by community parents and families, was sparking such vehement attacks from a small group of detractors.”

“With this record of success, we felt that the natural progression was to expand our instructional model to 6th to 8th grades,” Ruiz Lopez said. “More than two thirds of the students that we serve are residents of the Kingsbridge/Riverdale neighborhoods. We have had enthusiastic support of our Parents Advisory Council and the approval of the SUNY Charter Schools Institute.”

The statement continued, “It is unfortunate that Assemblyman Jeffrey Dinowitz has resorted to what appears to be political theatre by taking sides with the anti-charter school group of individuals who have launched a ‘Stop the Charter School Build Campaign’.” He has turned his back on his own constituents – hundreds of students and families of color who vote!”

Ruiz Lopez continued, “We are providing a high-quality education to disenfranchised communities of color to help them thrive and become contributors to a greater society. Our families are low-income or working-class from LatinX, African American, African, and Caribbean communities looking for opportunities for their children. We cannot afford to allow ‘nimbyism’ to deny an education to middle school students who live in the Kingsbridge community and deserve this opportunity to receive a quality education.”

The statement was accompanied by a copy of an explanatory letter about the project dated March 17, addressed to community members and neighbors.

We also asked both DOE and EDC for comment on the assemblyman’s earlier points, including the responsible use of funding. The latter referred us to NYC Economic Development Corporation (EDC), saying, “This is a charter school operating in private space as they are allowed to do by state law. I believe the first question involved the EDC, not us.” When we contacted EDC, we were informed that Build NYC was not involved with the school project. We asked the assemblyman for a comment further to EDC’s feedback, and will also follow up should we hear from DOE.

The NYPD’s Hate Crimes Unit is currently investigating an incident where a slab of concrete was tossed through the living room window of a home during the Jewish holiday of Passover. The targeted window had an Israeli flag.

Police officials say the incident occurred at 2:45 p.m. on Friday, April 7, at 2121 Matthews Avenue, between Lydig Avenue and Pelham Parkway. One police official said, “There is a complaint report on file for criminal mischief within the confines of the 49th Precinct.”

The official continued, “The report states an unknown suspect intentionally damaged a victim’s window by throwing a rock. A sign in the window read, “Wherever we stand, we stand with Israel.” The official added that there have been no arrests and the case is now being investigated as a hate crime.

The victim Rochelle Shapiro, who’s lived in the 6-story building since it opened in 1964, told Norwood News, “I was getting ready for Shabbat. It was the second day of Passover… and I look up and boom!” The large piece of concrete narrowly missed her and smashed the center window in her living room.

Shapiro added that if a large plant was not in the way, “it would have hit me straight on.” Not very hopeful that the suspect will be apprehended, she said, “They [the police] do not give their all anymore because everyone is against the cops. The frigging politicians turned away from the cops. There is no protection for anybody.”

Shapiro continued, “Because I was standing there, that could be a coincidence, because he could have done it because he sees the Israeli flag. They’re in Ramadan. There’s a terrible war going on over there right now.” She added, “The way the country is, the law is now in favor of the perpetrators and not the victims.”

Asked if she planned to remove her flag, Shapiro replied, “Absolutely not! I’m going to put up a sign saying you can’t kill us, us meaning all Jews.”
INQUIRING PHOTOGRAPHER

This week, we asked readers their opinions on the best way for City officials to respond to people experiencing a mental health crisis who are armed.

"Police need to control their anger most of the time, you know? Most of the time, I know they're doing their job but when you see a gun, it could be fake or real. They don't always have to shoot somebody in the head. They could shoot him in the leg or in the arm or tase him or talk to him. Pretty soon stop and frisk is going to come back. It's dangerous now. You've got to understand. You think this is a movie? Robots can't do everything. A robot can probably do it better than shooting someone in the head. Instead of shooting someone in the head, they should try and shoot him in the leg."

"In my opinion, the best solution is the same way everybody should know CPR, everybody should know how to deal with something like this in some form or fashion. If you choose to be a police officer, your job is to protect and serve, right? So, you should know how to restrain somebody unforcefully. You should know some type of martial arts or something or have some type of tranquilizer training with EMS... There needs to be multiple steps in place in order to deal with something like that. A lot of people going through something like that often just need somebody to talk to."

"Stop waiting for the City to respond and for the community to come out and respond, and I'll clarify. A lot of our issues here in The Bronx really stem from people minding their own business, that whole mantra 'snitches get stitches.' Even though I understand this, it's not what's helping the problem. In most of these cases, they're impressionable young adults that are angry, upset, and it is mental illness but it's a different kind of mental illness."

"Most important is a combined effort between police officers trained to handle these kinds of situations and EMS. During any breakdown or mental meltdown, we need people trained for this. Every case is different and cannot be handled as a crime. Few people even remember key details after such an incident. The City must find a way to train all employees so they know when they are in this kind of situation. They must know how to react and not escalate the situation."

"I personally feel that instead of just talking to them, I feel like [the police] should just tase them, like detain them first. I feel like you can't talk to a person with mental illness because you need to put them in a mental illness facility or a hospital... If you have mental illness, you shouldn't be put in jail because they won't learn anything, and they're supposed to be given medicine."

“Up Life” Easter Celebration Held in the Oval

By SÍLE MOLONEY

Local nonprofit, Up Life, held an Easter celebration in the Williamsbridge Oval on Sunday, April 9, complete with a DJ, balloons, games, dancing, and more for local families to enjoy. Kids were seen coloring “Up Life” on the stone-work in bright colors, and running around with bunny ears, blowing bubbles, and flying balloons on what was a sunny Easter Sunday.

Up Life founder, Robert Salkey, said of the event, “This is my community so I wanted to give back, and make sure I get everybody to learn how to network with each other, how to build each other, learn and have fun.”

Salkey later explained, “I came out of prison, and I just wanted to give back and change my whole aspect of life and show the world that coming from the ghetto, coming from a place where we not used to so much, we just want to give back, and show them that it doesn’t take much to give back.”

He continued, “I just basically wanted to give the world a better outlook of life and show them that we could come together and be like a family, and giving back is not that hard, because somebody in the household might have something, two of things and another household doesn’t have anything. So, if we could take one thing from a house and give it to another person and just share with people equally, then we could become a better place.”

Asked what more could be done to support the local community, Salkey said, “We need support from the officials. We need support from the government. We need support. I’m a non-funded nonprofit. I’ve been rocking seven years and I do need help and I want to help. I love the world, and I love my people.”

José Cornejo went to school with Salkey at P.S. 94 in Norwood. “So, I’m pretty much his family,” he said. “I live around the neighborhood. My family owns a few daycares (Kindercare). My mother, she used to have a daycare since early 2000s. So, we support each other in everything we do. You just have to make a call, and that’s pretty much it from the neighborhood.”

Asked what he felt was needed most in the community, Cornejo said, “More for the kids, anything for the kids. I see a lot of stuff that didn’t happen when we were younger. Now, I’m a father of three and another one on the way, and I love my neighborhood but any changes to better them in our neighborhood, I’d be grateful…starting with the schools, education, everything. A lot of people don’t have the privilege of going away [to summer camps] but we still here.”

Asked what supports were most needed for the formerly incarcerated on release, Salkey said, “They have to be strong. Statistics say two thirds go back to prison, and I’m the one third that will never go back, and I’m gonna show my community that we’ve come together and be great.”
Three Contractors Charged in First Bronx Manslaughter & Criminally Negligent Homicide Case

By SÍLE MOLONEY

Three building contractors were indicted on Wednesday, April 12, in the first Bronx case to bring charges of manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide for a construction fatality which took place at 94 East 208th Street in Norwood in 2019.

The victim, a father and 46-year-old Ecuadorian immigrant worker, Segundo Manuel Huerta Mayancela, was crushed by 1,000 pounds of debris in what was described as an egregiously dangerous building site, a joint investigation by NYC Department of Investigation (DOI) and the Bronx District Attorney's office found. Builders also allegedly falsified credentials/permits and flouted safety laws, according to the investigation.

Bronx District Attorney Darcel D. Clark and New York City DOI commissioner, Jocelyn E. Strauber, made the announcement during a press conference on April 12. Three contractors were charged in the death of Huerta Mayancela and a fourth man was charged on Wednesday, April 12, in the death of Segundo Manuel Huerta Mayancela during a construction accident at 94 East 208th Street in Norwood on Aug. 27, 2019.

Clark said, “The horrendous death of Segundo Manuel Huerta Mayancela, a 46-year-old construction worker who tragically died at the construction site was a deathtrap waiting to happen.”

She continued, “An unqualified company allegedly used fraudulent credentials, ignored oversight requirements and building code, and built a dangerously unstable structure. Workers are not expendable. Along with our partners at the Department of Investigation, we will hold anyone accountable for putting workers at risk in an already hazardous profession.”

Clark added, “The death of an Ecuadorian immigrant at a construction site led to the passage of Carlos’ Law, which creates greater accountability for tragic and avoidable injury to workers at New York construction sites and increases the penalties for criminal corporate liability for the death or serious physical injury of an employee, a felony or misdemeanor, by a fine of up to $500,000.”

She said the dangerous conditions presented in the case were precisely why Carlos’ Law was enacted, but added that the latest [Norwood] case predated the statute which only became law in 2022. “In the future, any construction-related fatalities in The Bronx will be met with this important tool [Carlos’ Law],” Clark said. The legislation is named after Carlos Moncayo, a 22-year-old construction worker who tragically died at a New York City construction site in 2015.

For her part, Strauber said, “The City’s buildings codes are written to support and advance safety on construction sites. As charged, these defendants failed to follow the law and to carry out their most basic responsibilities, including to show up in person to ensure safety standards were being met.”

She added in part, “These failures resulted in dangerous conditions that could have been prevented, and ultimately led to the death of one worker, and injuries to five others. As these charges show, there are grave consequences for those who would treat the City’s construction safety regulations as merely optional.”

Department of Buildings (DOB) acting commissioner Kazimir Vilenchik P.E. said, “New York City has among the strongest construction safety regulations anywhere in the country. The defendants’ stunning disregard of even the most basic of these regulations in this case is reprehensible.”

He added in part, “The Department of Buildings is committed to bringing accountability to the construction industry, and our work in support of this indictment sends a strong message that negligence on the worksite will not be tolerated.”

Clark identified the defendants as Augustine Adesanmi, 67, owner of Favored Design and Construction, who engaged in the actual construction; Akhhak Choudhary, 54, owner of Pioneer General Construction, a general contractor for the project; Abazi Okoro, 66, owner of Linzi Construction and a construction superintendent at site; and Fatos Mustafaj, 46.

Adesanmi is charged with second-degree manslaughter, and Choudhary and Okoro are charged with criminally negligent homicide; Adesanmi and Mustafaj are charged with second-degree grand larceny and Choudhary is charged with four counts of offering a false instrument for filing.

According to the Bronx district attorney’s office, defendants, Adesanmi, Okoro and Mustafaj were arraigned on April 11, before Bronx Supreme Court Justice Guy Mitchell and were put on supervised release. They are due back on June 8. Choudhary has not yet been arrested, Clark said, later adding, “We’re looking for him. He just hasn’t been apprehended yet.”

According to the investigation, in early 2019, Atin Batra entered into a formal agreement to pay $1.2 million to Favored Design to construct a 4-story, eight-unit residential building on a vacant lot he purchased at 94 E.208th Street. Adesanmi and Mustafaj allegedly claimed that Favored Design was qualified to engage in new construction and would file necessary permits and proof of insurance.

Clark said Favored Design did not have qualifications under the New York City Building Code to engage in construction of a new building, so they allegedly enlisted Choudhary, a quali-

Search for 17-Year-Old Missing Girl

The NYPD is seeking the public’s help locating a 17-year-old girl reported missing from Fordham Manor. Police said Silvia Morales was last seen on Friday, April 14, at around 3 p.m. inside her home at 2609 Briggs Avenue. She is described as female, has a medium complexion, is around 5 feet, 9 inches in height, weighs 140 pounds, has brown eyes, and black hair.

Anyone with information regarding this missing person is asked to call the NYPD’s Crime Stoppers Hotline at 1-800-577-TIPS (8477) or for Spanish, 1-888-57-PISTA (74782). The public can also submit their tips by logging onto the CrimeStoppers website at https://crimestoppers.nypdonline.org/ or on Twitter @NYPDTips. All calls are strictly confidential.

NY’s First Black Chief Judge Confirmed

Rowan D. Wilson was confirmed on April 18 as New York’s first Black chief judge of the Court of Appeals, the New York Law Journal reported. The associate judge was nominated by Gov. Kathy Hochul amid opposition from some, including sexual assault survivors. Wilson was ultimately approved on a 40-19 vote in the NYS Senate, the Journal reported. The vote was seen as an historic one, but some GOP opponents were critical of a March 16 decision Wilson authored regarding the overturning of a jury’s rape conviction People v. Regan, because of the lack of a speedy trial, the Journal reported. Wilson succeeds Judge Janet DiFiore who stepped down last year.

On Dec. 22, 2022, Hochul had nominated Hector LaSalle as chief judge of the same court, but that nomination had been met with some opposition by progressives, including reproductive rights groups. As reported by City & State, LaSalle’s nomination, if successful, would have made him the first Latino chief judge of the court, but ultimately it was rejected by the senate, primarily due to past decisions on topics like abortion, labor, and the rights of criminal defendants.

Feliz Drafts Bills to Curb Fake Paper Plates

District 15 City Council Member Oswald Feliz has introduced two bills to tackle fraudulent paper plates on motor vehicles. Feliz said fraudulent plates have created new public safety challenges: so-called ghost cars. “Like ghost guns, ghost cars are difficult to trace, and are being used not only to violate traffic laws with impunity, but also to commit minor crimes,” he said. “The plates are encouraging reckless behavior in our communities, and we must crack down on them.”

The councilman added, “The use of these plates exploded during pandemic-related DMV closures, which led to an increase in temporary paper plates, giving cover to individuals with fraudulent plates.” Feliz said online marketplaces like Craigslist and Facebook Marketplace must improve efforts to detect and remove listings related to fake plates, and the federal government must also create standards so that temporary plates produced in every state have enhanced security features that help prevent their easy fabrication.

St. Philip Neri School Honors First Responders

By José A. Giralt

Students at St. Philip Neri School in Bedford Park want first responders to know how much their service means to them. On Jan. 31, more than 50 first responders, including police officers, firefighters, and EMTs were invited to attend a special mass at St. Philip Neri Church, located right next to the school. The first responders ate breakfast with students in the parish hall, and later went on a tour of the school.

“It was fun,” said sixth grader Katherine Mundo, who had a very personal reason to be appreciative of those assigned with protecting the community. “My mom’s a cop, and I view her from a very high point,” said 11-year-old Katherine.

The event started with the pomp and ceremony of the NYPD Pipes and Drums Band, filling the church’s main hall with the distinctive sound of bagpipes as they entered and marched to the front.

This was followed by the department’s Color Guard and the invited guests then saw a procession of officers and other first responders take their seats. The multi-faith audience later heard a sermon, prayers, and some of the faithful participated in the communion service.

Some students were tasked with reading passages from the Scriptures at the podium. Fifth-grader Kaily Rosado, 10, was one of those privileged to read aloud. Poised and composed, she read her assigned passage to the audience of several hundred seated in the main stage of the church.

Later, she admitted to feeling tense before her turn came to speak. “I was really nervous,” Kaily said. She then shared a tip with Norwood News on how to overcome nerves when speaking in public: “I was nervous, but I just thought about my family, my friends, and my principal,” she said.

KAILY’S mother is a nurse. She asked her how the various first responders showed their appreciation to students for the mass and breakfast. She had a simple answer. “They smile and shake my hand,” she said.

The attendees included officers from all 12 precincts in The Bronx, according to Community Affairs Officer Stephen Echevarria at the 52nd Precinct. “Every Bronx precinct was represented, including Patrol Borough Bronx and the chief of the Bronx Philip Rivera was here as well.”

Meanwhile, Katherine’s mother, Tanya Marcial, was in attendance and not only felt the appreciation for her work as a police officer from her daughter, but from other students as well. “[This event] helps the children understand what it means to be a first responder,” said Marcial.

“The way the children receive us, it’s welcoming and very warm.” One interaction that Marcial witnessed was particularly poignant. “I saw two little boys speaking to some officers and they were very interested in the equipment,” she said. “They were able to touch the handcuffs and after they finished speaking with the officers, I overheard them speaking with each other. She said, she heard them say, “Wow, they felt so real, so heavy.”

Marcial added, “Hopefully that sparks some kind of interest going forward [and] maybe going forward, in the future, they will decide to join the department.”

Echevarria acknowledged that it is not always possible to get this close to the youngest members of the community and hear them out. He had some words of appreciation for events like the mass and breakfast.

“It’s an amazing thing that St. Philip Neri School does for our officers,” he said. “Not only here for the 52nd Precinct but the whole borough of The Bronx. It really shows how much they care about the police and community relations. We’re grateful to be here today.”
Old School Fun at Annual Easter Egg Hunts

By DAVID GREENE

Over 1,000 Bronx kids and their parents gathered in the Williamsbridge Oval park in Norwood for the annual Spring Easter Egg Hunt, organized by NYC Parks’ Department on Saturday, April 8.

The event comprised all types of games, arts & crafts, and fun activities for children of all ages, including traditional Easter egg hunts and “old school” potato sack races. To keep things fair and safe, both activities catered to kids of different age groups. The longest lines were for the biggest attraction, “Justy the Bunny.”

Morris Park resident Janet had her hands full as she told Norwood News, “Let me see... I’m with four kids... no five! Five children...yes! Four of them are over here, and one is in the Easter egg hunt.” Asked how the potasack race went down, she replied, “That’s where they were about to go now, little by little.”

She added that the children were aiming to hit every activity. Of her visit to this year’s Oval Easter celebration, Janet said, “This is my first time. I honestly think it’s awesome to provide the children with some fun!”

Heather Guerino of Crusaders for Children’s Rights, one of many event sponsors on the day and who provided the popular bunny, as well as free goodies, said after the event, “There were a lot of kids, a lot of parents. I was shocked that so many parents came out!”

Teaming up with the Parks’ department for the second year in a row, Guerino said, “It was nice, although there was a line, you know? Everybody wanted to take pictures with Justy the Bunny.” She added, “It was very nice, and the parents were very patient; they waited on line for their turn. I wished more elected officials had participated.”

According to Guerino, both State Sen. Gustavo Rivera (S.D.33), who sponsored two magic shows at the event, and Assemblyman Jeff Dinowitz (A.D. 81) stopped by the event on the day. Guerino’s husband, Sirio, co-

According to Sarah Bishow-Semevolos, manager of the Oval Recreation Center, over 1,000 people turned out for the event, and over 720 kids participated in the various Easter egg hunts.

Other sponsors of the event included the Jerome Gun Sack races. To keep things fair and safe, both activities catered to kids of different age groups. The longest lines were for the biggest attraction, “Justy the Bunny.”

She added that the children were aiming to hit every activity. Of her visit to this year’s Oval Easter celebration, Janet said, “This is my first time. I honestly think it’s awesome to provide the children with some fun!”

Heather Guerino of Crusaders for Children’s Rights, one of many event sponsors on the day and who provided the popular bunny, as well as free goodies, said after the event, “There were a lot of kids, a lot of parents. I was shocked that so many parents came out!”

Teaming up with the Parks’ department for the second year in a row, Guerino said, “It was nice, although there was a line, you know? Everybody wanted to take pictures with Justy the Bunny.” She added, “It was very nice, and the parents were very patient; they waited on line for their turn. I wished more elected officials had participated.”

According to Guerino, both State Sen. Gustavo Rivera (S.D.33), who sponsored two magic shows at the event, and Assemblyman Jeff Dinowitz (A.D. 81) stopped by the event on the day. Guerino’s husband, Sirio, co-

Shut-Off Not a Gas
I am one of the co-op residents living in the Amalgamated Housing Cooperative, located in Van Cortlandt Village. Luckily for me, I am not living in one of the 827 apartments whose occupants are threatened with having their stove/oven gas shut off as of July 1. Based on NYC Local Law 125, an inspection done in December of 2022 determined that gas line repairs were needed in six buildings and [in] sections of two others. Due to financial constraints, the Amalgamated cannot afford to do the repairs by this deadline.

In his “On My Mind” column in the February/March edition of Community News, Amalgamated Board member Ed Yaker wrote of the problems the Amalgamated has had with the agency that regulates it, the New York State Division of Housing and Community Renewal (DHCR). The chief problem appears to be that for the purpose of making repairs, the Amalgamated wanted to borrow money and did not receive DHCR approval.

This was in 2020, when interest rates were historically low. The reason for this rejection was purely bureaucratic. The Integrated Physical Needs Assessment was not submitted in the format DHCR required. Currently, co-op members (myself included) have been contacting elected officials asking them to help resolve this issue. I hope that our elected officials and the DHCR will put in the effort to find a reasonable solution so that all co-op residents will continue to be able to cook in their apartments.

Construction Safety
Construction season is now underway. As the New York State Department of Transportation (NYSDOT) continues to build and enhance our transportation infrastructure throughout NYC and across the State in 2023, I want to urge the public to help us keep our workers safe. In The Bronx, we are advancing a number of large projects that are bringing tremendous benefits to the public, such as the $1.7 billion Hunts Point Access Improvement Project.

[This is] an unprecedented State investment that is enhancing infrastructure and connectivity in the South Bronx, while also improving the quality of life for residents. Huge projects like this take hundreds and hundreds of workers to get the job done. These are husbands and wives, fathers and mothers, children, sisters, and brothers. All their family members want them to return home safely after work each night, and we at NYSDOT do, too! The public has a critical role to play in work zone safety. Slow down and drive carefully in work zones. Remember, our workers’ lives are depending upon you!

Norwood: Murder at Woodlawn Station
By SÍLE MOLONEY & DAVID GREENE

A 45-year-old man died following a fatal shooting (murder) in Norwood police said. The victim was later named by police as Devon Millington from the Wakefield section of The Bronx, who had previously served reduced time in prison on murder and drug-related charges.

Police said the incident occurred on Saturday April 15, at 5:47 a.m. in the vicinity of Woodlawn station, the last stop on the 4 subway line in The Bronx. The previous morning, a 52-year-old man had been robbed and assaulted at Mosholu Parkway subway station, one stop before Woodlawn.

A police spokesperson said officers from the 52nd Precinct responded to a 911 call regarding a male who had been shot in front of 3700 Jerome Avenue. “Upon arrival, police discovered a 45-year-old male with a gunshot wound to the head,” the NYPD spokesperson said. “The victim was transported to Montefiore Medical Center where he was pronounced deceased,” the spokesperson added.

There are no arrests, and the investigation is ongoing. One resident said he was told by other people in the neighborhood the shooting happened on the elevated train platform of Woodlawn station and the victim was seen exiting the station by the stairs in blood-soaked clothes.

Norwood News followed up with the NYPD on Saturday to corroborate the veracity of the resident’s statement. An NYPD spokesperson responded saying, “I can’t confirm it at this time. We haven’t had any... we’re still waiting for updates, and I don’t have that detail.”

Officers and detectives were seen investigating and interviewing an MTA employee on the Woodlawn subway platform, part of which was cordoned off, on Saturday morning/afternoon.

In response to a subsequent inquiry by Norwood News, the NYPD confirmed on Sunday that Millington had two prior arrests, one for murder in the 47th Precinct, which covers the Bronx neighborhoods of Woodlawn, Wakefield, Williamsbridge, Baychester, Edenwald, Olinville, Fishbay, and Woodlawn Cemetery, in October 2000, and another for burglary, also in the 47th Precinct, in 1991.

As first reported by the NY Daily News, and according to records from NYS Department of Corrections, Millington was discharged on parole on July 1, 2019, having been convicted for second-degree murder (a Class A1 felony) and for promoting prison contraband in the first degree (a Class D felony), and having served time in prison since April 18, 2002. Millington’s aggregate minimum sentence had been 18 years, 0 months, and 0 days, and his aggregate maximum sentence had been life in prison.

According to the report by the NY Daily News, “Millington was just 23 when he and two buddies went drinking and got high at the former Bill and Bob’s Sports Bar in Wakefield, the Bronx, on July 20, 2000. About 2 a.m., the trio decided to rob bartender Everard “Erik” Gerrald and fatally shot him, according to court filings.”

Norwood News spoke to some other employees in the area and asked if they felt safe generally in light of the shooting. One said, “That’s normal here.” Another added, “That’s what New York has become. It’s a reality. The more that we say, the more that we ask for, the more that we tell, the more we point, anything... it’s not going to change what happens. We’re not a priority. It doesn’t matter.” We asked if by “we,” he meant The Bronx generally. He replied, “the community.”

This latest incident follows a police-involved shooting on Thursday, April 13, outside the KFC premises in Kingsbridge, also on the elevated subway tracks of the West 231st Street subway station.

Anyone with information in regard to this incident is asked to call the NYPD’s Crime Stoppers Hotline at 1-800-577-TIPS (8477) or for Spanish, 1-888-57-PISTA (74782).

fied contractor, to obtain a permit. Four notarized documents containing false statements were allegedly filed in Choudhary’s name to obtain the building permit, including a forged insurance policy for the worksite.

The district attorney said the building code requires the general contractor to appoint a construction superintendent, a qualified outside professional who visits the site daily to ensure the work is being done according to the NYC building code and sound construction practices. Okoro, a former employee of the NYC Department of Design and Construction (DDC), allegedly was paid $3,000 for the use of his credentials, and allegedly never visited the site.

Clark said that during the spring and summer of 2019, work continued at the premises without a qualified general contractor or construction superintendent monitoring the work. Adesanmi was the designated “competent person” and was supposed to be present at all times. On the day of the collapse, he was not there, Clark said.

According to the investigation, on August 27, 2019, workers were bringing cinder blocks and bricks from the second floor onto a work platform at the third floor. The platform was made of sheets of metal that were placed on top of metal joists. The joists were not properly secured to the structure. Workers had brought nearly a ton of material onto the platform when the unsecured joists fell forward and failed, causing the platform, the workers on the third floor and building materials on the front half of the building to fall onto the workers below.

Several workers received serious injuries and Huerta Mayancela died as a result of blunt force trauma with crushing injuries, according to the prosecution. As reported, construction worker union members held a vigil in September 2019 to mark Huerta Mayancela’s death.

In response to a question, Clark confirmed that the building in question, which is still under construction in Norwood, is under new construction management, and none of the former building contractors are involved with the project any longer.

Aside from addressing the fraudulent aspect of the forged paperwork, Norwood News asked what could be done going forward in terms of potentially visiting construction sites earlier to ensure all regulations are actually being followed. Vilenchik said that since the incident occurred, some additional actions took effect in terms of the new building construction code 2022, which established criteria for the placement of cold formed steel poles which he said now have to be inspected by a special inspector.

“Additionally, if you have to store temporary construction equipment the area identified to accept the construction materials must be inspected by a special inspector,” Vilenchik said. “Under normal circumstances, this is a licensed professional engineer or [inaudible].” He added that existing laws had also been disregarded in this case, and that DOB wanted to send a message that fraudulently obtaining credentials was totally unacceptable.

In response to a question on whether the City has changed any of its oversight procedures following the incident, Matthew Millner, NYC DOB director of construction safety engineering, said a lot of new regulations were now in effect around cold formed steel, and added that industry notices had been issued to other sites around the use of cold formed steel prior to the incident as well. “It was unfortunate that it [a notice] was missed in this case,” he said. “There are a lot of compounding issues that can affect a failure of this nature and it’s certainly our goal to help mitigate them.”

Millner added there is also a construction safety compliance guide who goes out proactively and inspects sites and tries to catch issues in real time. “We obviously can’t catch everything, but we have made attempts to fill in the gaps here,” he said.

Last September, Norwood News reported how one woman miraculously escaped injury after a construction site boom truck carrying poles broke and collapsed onto her car in Bedford Park. We had previously reported on a construction-related accident in the South Bronx and the various resulting measures that were taken following the incident, as well as on DOB-imposed fines on various Bronx-based, non-compliant construction-related entities.

Clark thanked all those involved in the investigation. She later offered her condolences, once again, to the family of Huerta Mayancela. Present at the press conference were his wife, Maria, and daughters. Two other family members, twins, were not present. Visibly upset, and with her voice shaking, Maria said, “Good Afternoon. I demand justice for my husband. I know I won’t see him again but [inaudible]. To the DA, here in the Bronx, who is doing everything for me, I’m very thankful for this investigation. I want justice for my husband. Thank you.”

Fire on Kingsbridge Road Subway Track

By SÍLE MOLONEY

Video of some flames and smoke seen on the elevated subway platform of the Kingsbridge Road subway station raised alarm bells on Tuesday, April 18. A spokesperson for the MTA later explained that a smoke condition was reported at around 8.05 a.m. and that the 4 train service was suspended until 8.57 a.m. between Woodlawn and Burnside Avenue while FDNY investigated the incident.

Firefighters were also captured on video footage of the incident, posted to the Citizens’ App by local residents. MTA officials explained that there was one standing southbound 4 train at Moshulu Parkway that remained at the station while the investigation was underway, and that customers were able to exit or stay on the train during this time. According to the MTA, service was restored in both directions at 8.57 a.m. with residual delays.

When contacted, an FDNY spokesperson told Norwood News a call was received at 8.13 a.m. about a track fire on the IRT 4 (subway line 4), that it was extinguished and that there were no injuries. We asked if the cause of the fire was known. We did not receive an immediate response.

Smoke and some apparently low flames are seen on the elevated train track at Kingsbridge Road subway station by Jerome Avenue, which serves the 4 train on Tuesday morning, April 18, 2023, while firefighters are seen underneath the track, responding to the incident.
POLICE FROM THE Chell added that when two officers showed up at the location, they were met by the father and began to enter the walkway to the vestibule of the building, explaining that the incident began in an apartment.

Chell continued, “At this time, the subject comes out and clearly becomes agitated when he sees the officers, drops a bag, produces a large kitchen knife, starts advancing towards the officers. He’s given numerous instructions to drop the knife at which time he does not comply and results in the officers striking the subject.”

Chell said police immediately rendered aid and called for an ambulance and De la Cruz was transported to hospital in critical condition. Police said the department were reviewing the tapes and an internal investigation was ongoing into the incident which unfolded within the space of about 28 seconds.

Back at the rally, another female protestor, speaking in Spanish, described Raul as “a young man of Christ.” Refer-ing to the responding officers as “abusers,” she lamented how police could fire a gun at someone without knowing whether the person is armed, and that police were shouting “a schizophrenic episode,” and that his father asked 311 for medical authorities to commit Raul before something went awry.

Another man, speaking in Spanish, said, “It’s not possible to call the police for help because you’re going to get killed, it’s clear.” Yet another female protestor shouted fervently and forcefully in Spanish, “We need help from police for mental health problems!”

Referring to the police response, she added, in part, “There is no regard for [human] life. We want another way to respond to those with mental health problems! We want another way! We want another way!” This set off a chant of “Another way, another way! We want help!” by those gathered.

For the most part, police did not respond to the protestors, some of whom held signs which read, “Who will protect us from the police?” and “Justice for Raul.”

Gothamist had reported that on the day of the incident the father of the victim, identified as Santos de la Cruz, had reportedly not dialed 911 but 311 for his son who was reportedly experiencing “a schizophrenic episode,” and that his father asked 311 for medical authorities to commit Raul before something went awry.

Gothamist had reported that they were informed by 911 officials that 311 calls are automatically routed to the NYPD if the incident relates to a mental health crisis and the impacted person is armed, and that police decide which department will be dispatched to handle the situation.

Raul’s father reportedly said Raul did not understand English and that police were shouting at his son in English when they arrived. The incident followed an announcement, as reported, in mid-December by Mayor Eric Adams of a new plan, regarded as controversial by some, to provide outreach and care to people with untreated severe mental illness, part of which involves initial contact with police.

Adrian later referenced the mayor’s latest mental health outreach program, saying police had been empowered to hospitalize people with mental illnesses without consent. “They get to act with impunity,” he said. “You don’t get to keep getting away with this stuff without people coming out, and without some fking protests, without the demands, without the solidarity. You’re going to get killed? For what? We’re just talking in Spanish with female members of the community affairs team. Following earlier calls for senior members of the press to come to the protest, one of the female police officers, speaking in Spanish, appeared to offer Victor and one other person the opportunity to speak with the deputy inspector about the incident if he wished. Some protestors were then heard saying to police, “I think you guys are trying to take advantage of the situation.” They suggested to Victor that he call his lawyer for advice and produced a cellphone. Another protestor said to police, “There’s nothing they can do so what do you expect to accomplish? Tell us the names and that’s it.”

Another female protestor rephrased the chant saying, “They’re trying to divide us, Yo!” The officers were heard repeating the offer for Victor to talk to Scheublin if he wanted, or later by phone if he wanted. He nodded, and speaking in Spanish, replied, “Thank you,” and walked away. The protest broke up about an hour after it began.

Norwood News later spoke with Victor who confirmed the family had only called 311, and not 911. Asked if the family had said they were in danger when they called, he said, “no.” Of Raul, he said, “He is a young man of work. We want justice for Raul.”

We asked Victor about a report by Gothamist in which Raul’s father had mentioned that Raul’s faith as an evangelist reportedly made him stop taking medication to treat his mental health condition. Victor replied in Spanish, “I don’t know, I don’t know anything about that, I don’t know the church in question.”

During a general public safety briefing with NYC Deputy Mayor for public safety, Phil Banks, on Friday, April 14, Banks referenced three other police-involved incidents (one fatal) which all took place on April 13 (one in Kingsbridge) and said they were all under investigation but did not talk about the March 26 incident. We’ve reached out to the Mayor’s office for comment.

“Banks said, “The bottom line here is there are too many weapons on our streets, end of the story, bottom line. The NYPD and other law enforce agencies have seized thousands of illegal guns over the past year, and we will continue to work to drive down gun violence,” he said. Chell had confirmed on March 26 that the shooting of De la Cruz was already under investigation.

Norwood News contacted the NYPD for comment on the police response to the incident, the demands of the protestors, and whether the two involved officers were still on active duty pending the outcome of the investigation. A spokesperson referred us to their website which explains the department releases body-worn camera video of critical incidents within 30 calendar days of an incident.

According to the NYPD, in some cases, it may take more than 30 days if the investigation is complex, a court issues an order delaying or preventing release of the footage, or additional time is needed to allow a civilian department to take a look at the video. As yet, no video was released.

Following a 2013 court case, Yahanit Padilla Torres v The City of York, which followed a domestic violence incident when the female victim had not initially been provided with an interpreter when she called police, the City implemented a language access program.

First responders would use a language app to access online interpreters to assist non-Eng-ish speaking victims in times of crisis. Norwood News asked the NYPD if this policy also applied when a person was armed. We did not receive an immediate response.

Back at the rally, one young girl, identified as Raul’s cousin, broke down in tears saying, “He’s my cousin. Why you want to kill him? For what? We’re just here to be his friend. He’s a good man. Ya’ll are going to give people a heart attack. You’re out of your mind!”
